Melanie Carina Schmoll, PhD, Writes Book on Holocaust education "Hatred of Jews–A Failure of Holocaust education?", Scheduled for February 2025 Publication

Germany–Jan. 9, 2025–Melanie Carina Schmoll, PhD, German Historian and Holocaust Education expert who works as research fellow, author, editor, advisor, and speaker, will write “Hatred of Jews–A Failure of Holocaust Education?” on the possible failure of Holocaust education in light of the dramatic rise in Jew-hating incidents since October 2023.

After years of working in Holocaust education not only as an academic and in the university environment but also in the public school system, Schmoll became also an author and consultant for academic and school teaching materials, both digital and traditional print. Based on her own academic research and the studies she has conducted, Schmoll also decided to become active in practice.

Schmoll knows firsthand that the existing teaching and learning materials in Holocaust education could often be improved, and that there are many approaches that would be helpful here—if only they were put into practice. Because of the massive increase in hatred of Jews worldwide, the question whether Holocaust education had failed increasingly arose.

In her new book, Schmoll explores precisely this question. Is there a connection between a failure of Holocaust education and the rise in hatred of Jews? “The assumption that people receive a kind of medicine - Holocaust education - and then automatically hate Jews less is wrong,” said Dr. Melanie Carina Schmoll. “It takes more than the Holocaust education practiced today to make people think and change their views.”

The book teaches academics and practitioners why and what to expect when teaching about the Holocaust. Content, outcome of Holocaust education, gaps in knowledge and the reasons for are examined. In comprehensible explanations, Schmoll shows the potential failures in Holocaust education and why the teaching of history still matters. Hatred of Jews—A Failure of Holocaust Education? bridges the gap between academic research and practical support for educators, teachers, and textbook publishers. A step-by-step guide helps on how to improve it in the future.

A Failure of Holocaust Education? bridges the gap between academic research and practical support for educators, teachers, and textbook publishers. A step-by-step guide helps on how to improve it in the future.

Key ideas:

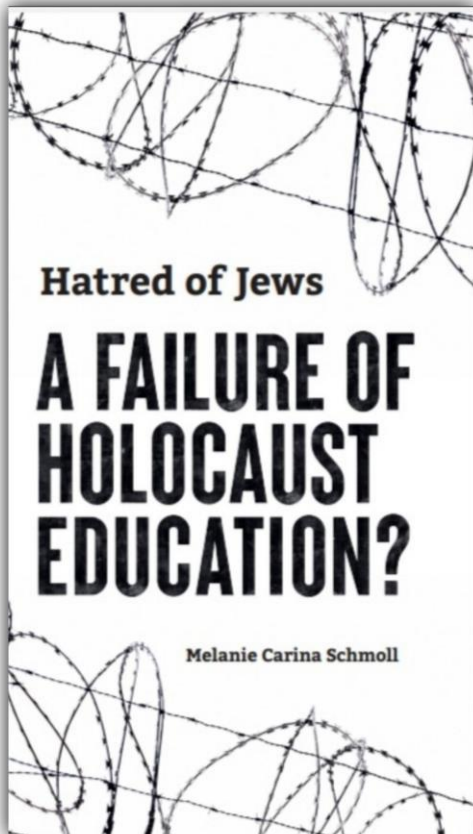

- The assumption that people receive a kind of medicine–Holocaust education–and then automatically hate Jews less is wrong. It takes more than the Holocaust education practiced today to make people think and change their views.
- Learning and understanding must be added so that Holocaust education can have an impact beyond mere factual knowledge. To extend the benefits of Holocaust education necessary ideas for restructuring and improving Holocaust education are presented. They are not only intended to serve authors, editors, and publishers as a pool of ideas and pointers but also to help practitioners in the school and extracurricular environment.
- By implementing these ideas teaching will be turned into learning. Learning will be turned into understanding and will pave the way for changing minds and experience.
